

EDWARD EXPOSES HIS HIDDEN FEELINGS

- by Edward Del Rincon

I don't know where to start so I'll tell you about myself. I like to listen to music (on my C.D player) by various artists which range from Air Supply to U2, but my favorite group is Simple Minds. I guess everyone knows my favorite female singer is Madonna. For almost 4 years now I've been compiling the weekly charts (music charts that is) with the help of a couple of friends, mainly my good friends Dulcy Israel and Pete Gordon who work at Rolling Stone and Billboard magazine. It's only been this year that I distribute them at school. The part you've been waiting for- the past on my singing. I should say "so called" singing because I don't have a good singing voice, and I think everybody's pulling my leg (those who say I have a good voice) wanting me to sing. The singing started last year in Mr. Asconi's T.D. 44 class where I started humming and singing the Four Season's "Sherry" Last Thursday when I got up on stage to be auctioned off, I didn't think anybody was going to buy me because you know I'm not exactly the most popular guy in the school. But when the bidding started at 50¢ and began to quickly rise to $24. I just couldn't believe it. People were actually bidding for me!!! Well I've got to admit I did like the publicity but I would not like to go up on stage to sing everyday of the week.

I'm just your average gentleman, who likes having a good time with a couple of friends, have a couple of laughs, etc.

GRAD OF THE WEEK-Miss Patricia Lynn McDonald
This week, the honour of GOTW goes to the pretty pleasant, proud and passionate Patricia McDonald. Patricia would first like to say that she is Scottish and not Irish. Coming from a large family of seven children, Patricia has been known for her ability to turn red very easily when excited or embarrassed. Patricia says she is also known for her sarcasm as well. Her most prized possession is her brain. She has never once missed the Honour Society not even once since grade seven. This term her average was 83.4%. She is in all advanced courses and tutors students from the younger grade levels. Patricia is also involved in many school sports and activities. This year she is on the Grad-Fund Raising Committee and Carnival Committee. In grade seven, she was on the track team and in grade ten, she was on the girls soccer team. Patricia is currently one of the two captains of the juvenile girls basketball team. With Patricia on the team, they were able to make it as the third best of all the Catholic schools in Montreal. When Patricia went to Chicoutimi, the coach from Bishop's college wanted her. She was also picked for an all-star team at the French college, CEGEP de Saint-Laurent. When she went to Vanier, the coach there, asked her, Brigitte Edwards, and Breenda Benson to be on their team next year. When asked what is her secret in basketball, she said, "Nice breath?", (whatever that is supposed to mean). Out of school, she dives, plays water polo and will be a lifeguard this summer. When we asked her what is her favorite subject, you would never believe her answer-GYM taught by Mrs. Hemmings! The only course she didn't like was learning about lightwaves and lambdas in her advanced physics class and everything about her French Canadian History class. She said she had to be forced to learn French Canadian History and says, "It was too boring to be real." Patricia is not sure what her future will lead to. One of her ambitions is to be a prosecuting lawyer so she can personally throw every criminal of Montreal into jail for life. Patricia added, "I'll probably just end up being a FAT housewife." Next we asked her if she could go out with one boy in our school, who could have the honour?" Patricia said, "It would have to be Tup because he is 'an absolute dreamboat'. Next to him, they all seem so BLAHHH!" Tup is really fond of Patricia and will definitely put her down on his waiting list. As we come to the end of this article, we'll leave you with advice from Patricia herself, "If you are going to foul out, make sure the last one is worth it!"
